

Angel was the new kid at a new school.
He felt shy and alone. He wasn't sure how to make new friends.

One day while visiting the library,
Angel scanned the colorful spines
of books until one caught his eye:
a bright orange book resting on the top shelf. That was the book he wanted!

He stood on his tippy toes and stretched out his arms, but he couldn't reach it.

Then Angel noticed his taller classmate, Oliver, standing nearby. Surely, he could reach it! Angel took a deep breath, took a few steps, and bravely asked Oliver for help.

Oliver happily stood on his toes and stretched out his arms and reached for the bright orange book. But just as he grabbed hold of it, a white, folded piece of paper dropped out of the book . . .

